

Write Here, Write Now! Social and Environmental Action Writing Camp

This summer, the Marian University Writing Center and Department of English is offering Write Here, Write Now! Social and Environmental Action Writing Camp online for high school writers. At camp, students will focus on social justice and environmental issues, working closely with instructors and peers to practice a range of creative, persuasive, and poetic place-based writing activities.

WHO'S INVITED

Students in grades 9-12

WHEN

- June 22-26: 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.
- Pre-camp warm-up activities and materials delivered June 17

COST

- $75
- Financial scholarship may be available

REGISTRATION DEADLINE IS JUNE 13

In the wake of COVID-19, understanding our relationship to our ecosystem has become even more important as we are forced to find new ways to connect with our communities, our world, and our selves. Join us in a week-long online writing camp to explore these ideas and look for answers to these questions:

- Where is your place in the world and who shares it with you?
- Who gets to make decisions about environmental issues and green spaces in your community?
- Whose voice should be represented in conversation about environmental justice?
- Why should a healthy working ecosystem matter to you and your neighbors?
- What inspires others to act?

Over the course of a week, writers in the Write Here, Write Now! Social and Environmental Action Writing Camp will learn about the environment around them, read prominent environmental writers' works, and develop their voice through online collaboration, focused instruction, and highly interactive writing exercises.

For more information and to register, visit marian.edu/writingcamps.

marian.edu | f t i v

Marian University is sponsored by the Sisters of St. Francis, Oldenburg, Indiana.
JUN. 2020